AN UNCOMMON PLANET

March 24 – May 5, 2022

The Flinn Gallery is pleased to announce its 4th show of the 2021-22 season, An Uncommon Planet. The exhibition features the work of two photographers, Jonathan Pozniak of New York City and Eric Seplowitz of upstate New York, and is curated by Greenwich residents, Nancy Heller and Alexis Abram. Both photographers are interested in the natural world and depict its unique features from different perspectives.

Jonathan Pozniak captures the majestic beauty of expansive icebergs and aerial landscapes, while Eric Seplowitz explores small minerals and rocks formed over millions of years and reveals details that are invisible to the naked eye. Despite these differences in scale and perspective, the photographs transform into abstract patterns of shapes and colors that share much in common. Planned in conjunction with Earth Day, these photographs encourage us to take a closer look and appreciate the astounding beauty of our fragile and ever-changing planet.

Jonathan Pozniak grew up in Boston and gravitated to photography while a student at The Art Institute of Boston. After a formative year at the Paris Photographic Institute, he moved to New York City, where he established himself as a commercial photographer for the fashion and beauty industries. His turning point and entry into the world of fine art and travel photography occurred in 2010 during a trip to Antarctica. Jonathan discovered a “natural paradise” that changed him as a person and began his quest to travel around the world to capture the mystical beauty of icebergs and the geological wonders of vast landscapes. His photographs speak to both the permanence and impermanence of our ever-changing world.

Raised in Stamford, CT, Eric Seplowitz credits his junior curator experience at the Stamford Museum and Nature Center with sparking his interest in nature, outdoor education, and later photography. As a trained geologist, Eric turned his attention to rocks and minerals 5 years ago and created a body of work called UnEarthed, which is featured in An Uncommon Planet. Eric uses a 50MP camera and macro lenses to achieve a depth of detail that one would rarely see. His photographs include single exposures as well as composite images created from hundreds of shots, each focused on a slightly different spot. The results yield colorful, abstract forms that are both beautiful and intriguing.

An opening reception will be held Thursday, March 24 from 6 to 8pm.

Events:

Artist Talks will take place in the Flinn Gallery from 2 – 3 pm both days
